

monday 6th Jan

Tonight we're looking at the work of one of the most prolific influences on English art and design in the late 19th century and early 20th century. His name is William Morris. One of the more well-known features of his work was in wallpapers. Have a look at the sort of designs he produced and have a go at creating a wallpaper of your own using his style of work.

What you will need a piece of lining paper painted before this evening.

the rest is your choice

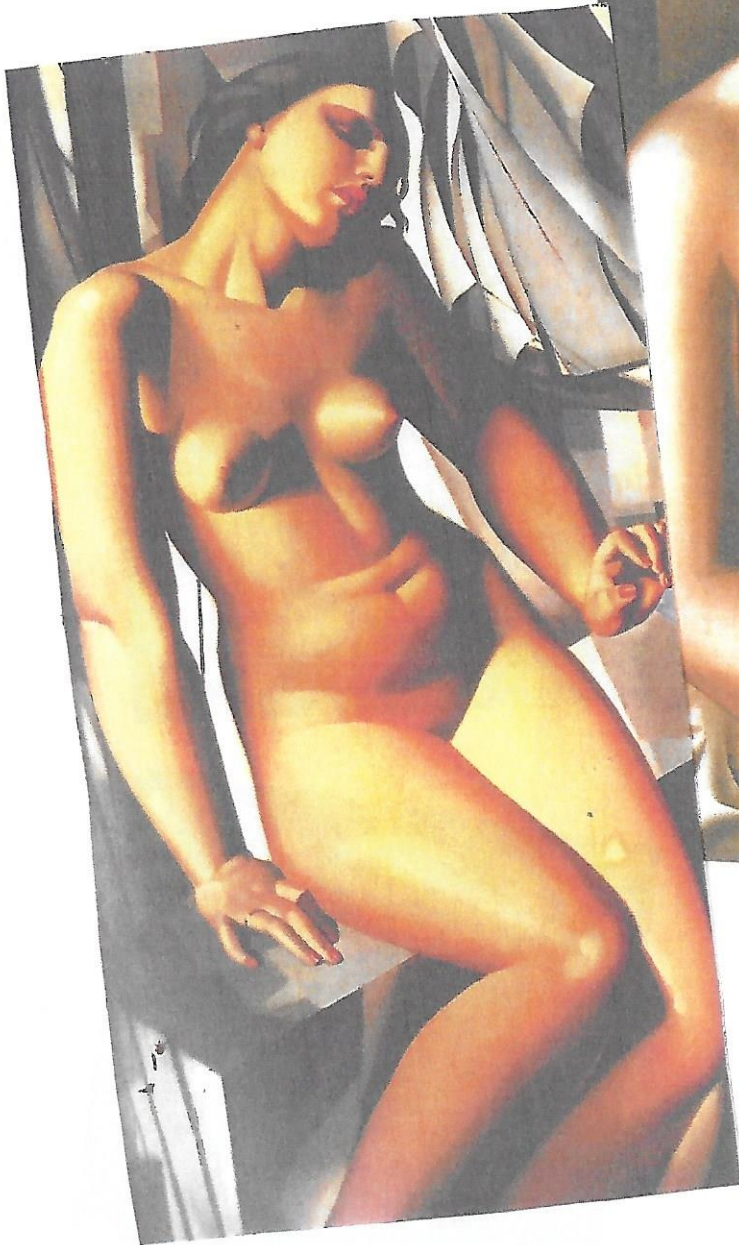

monday 13 jan

Tonight we are going to revisit the work of a famous Polish artist called Tamara de Lempicka. She produced some really almost hypnotic work in her days in Paris in the 1920's. Last time we tried this you all wore the little hats with lights on. This time we have our one lighting system which should make the poses much better defined. Ema is our model for the evening.

What you need

Your choice

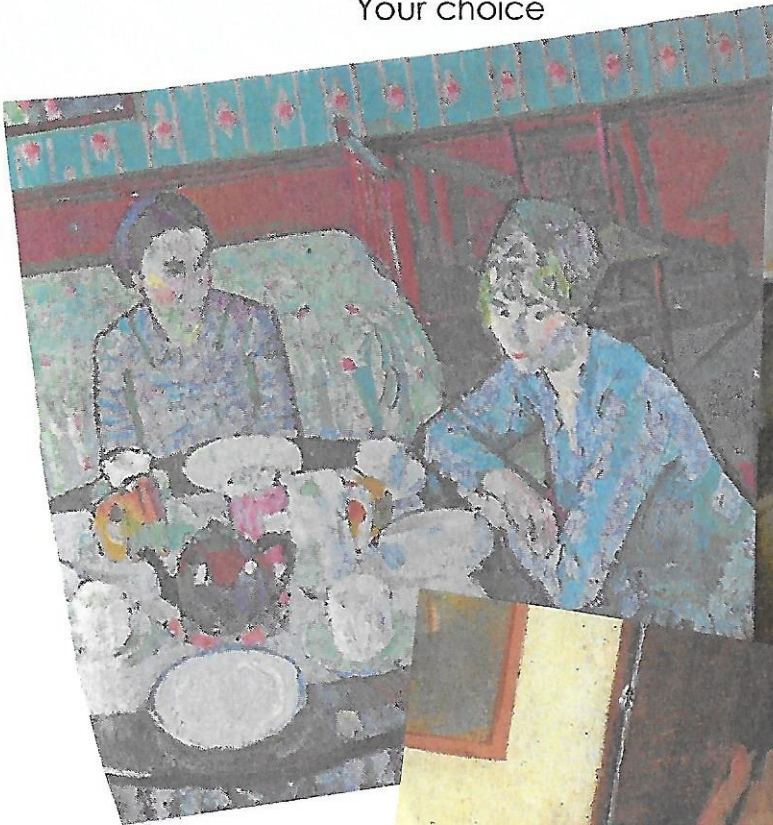

monday 20th jan

Intimacy in art is prevalent in the work of some artists such as Jack Vettriano, Rodin and Harold Gilman. To night try to paint a picture which depicts an act of intimacy. The subject matter and style is entirely up to you. Be brave.

What to use

Your choice

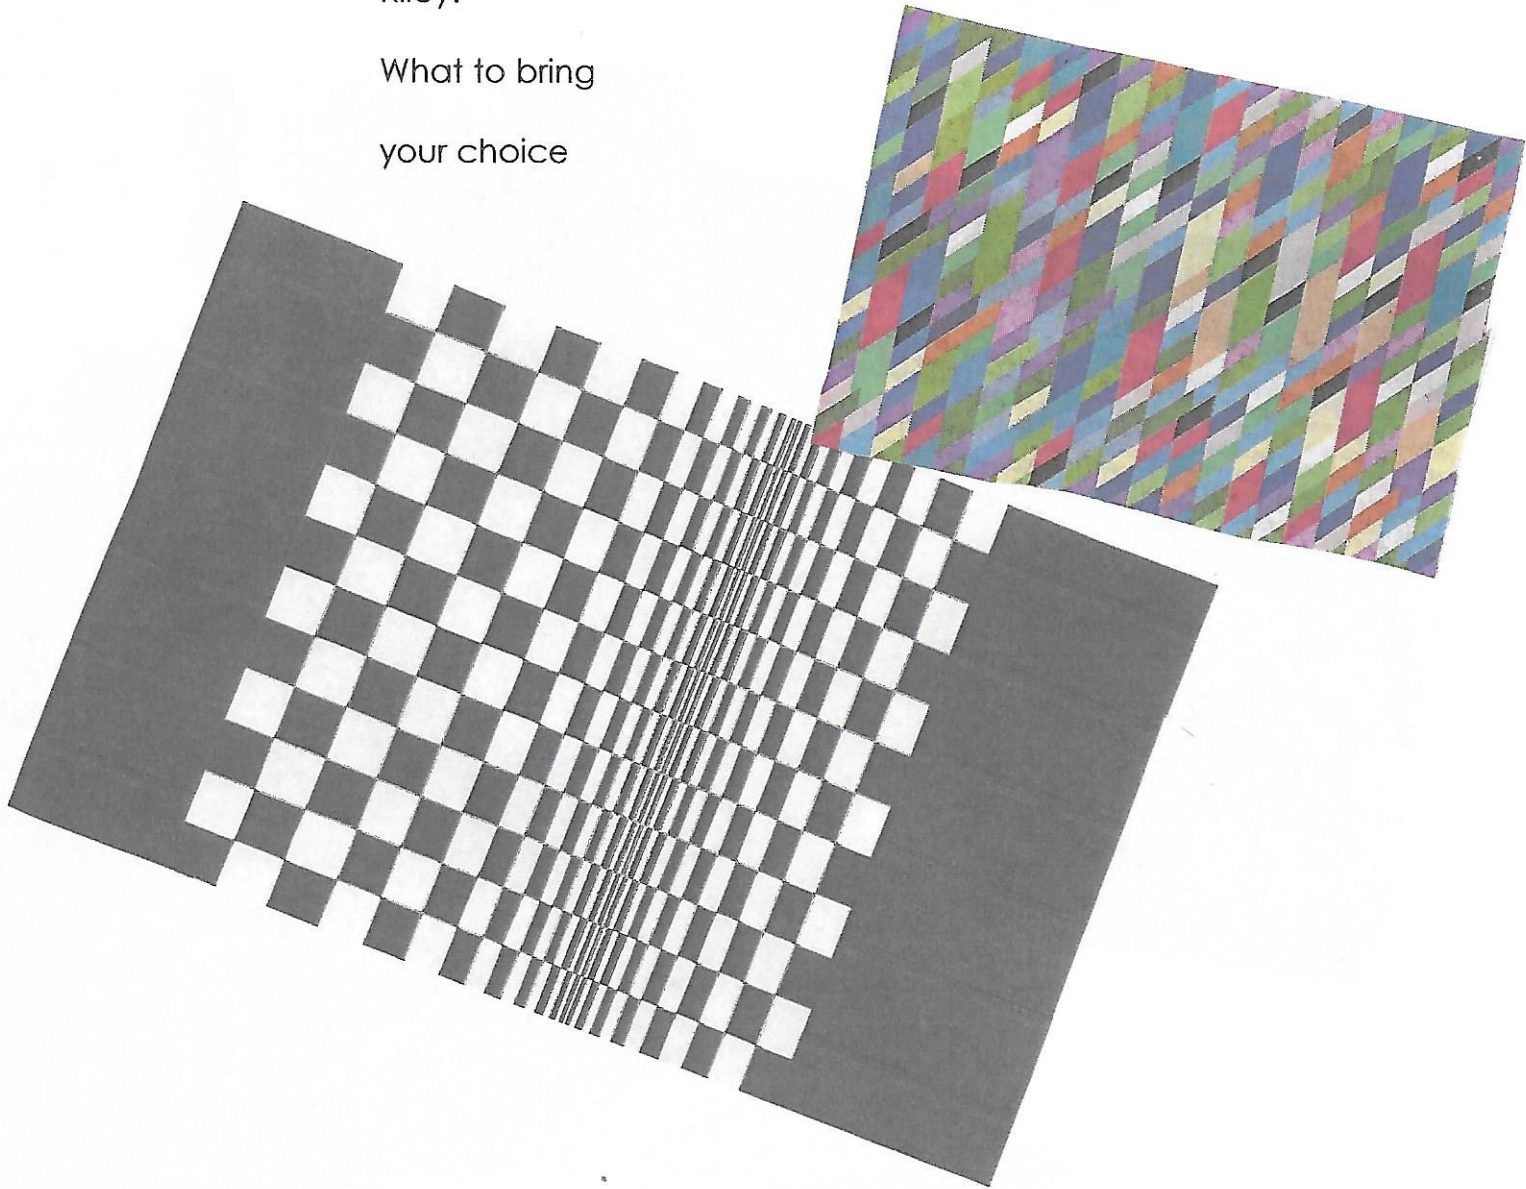

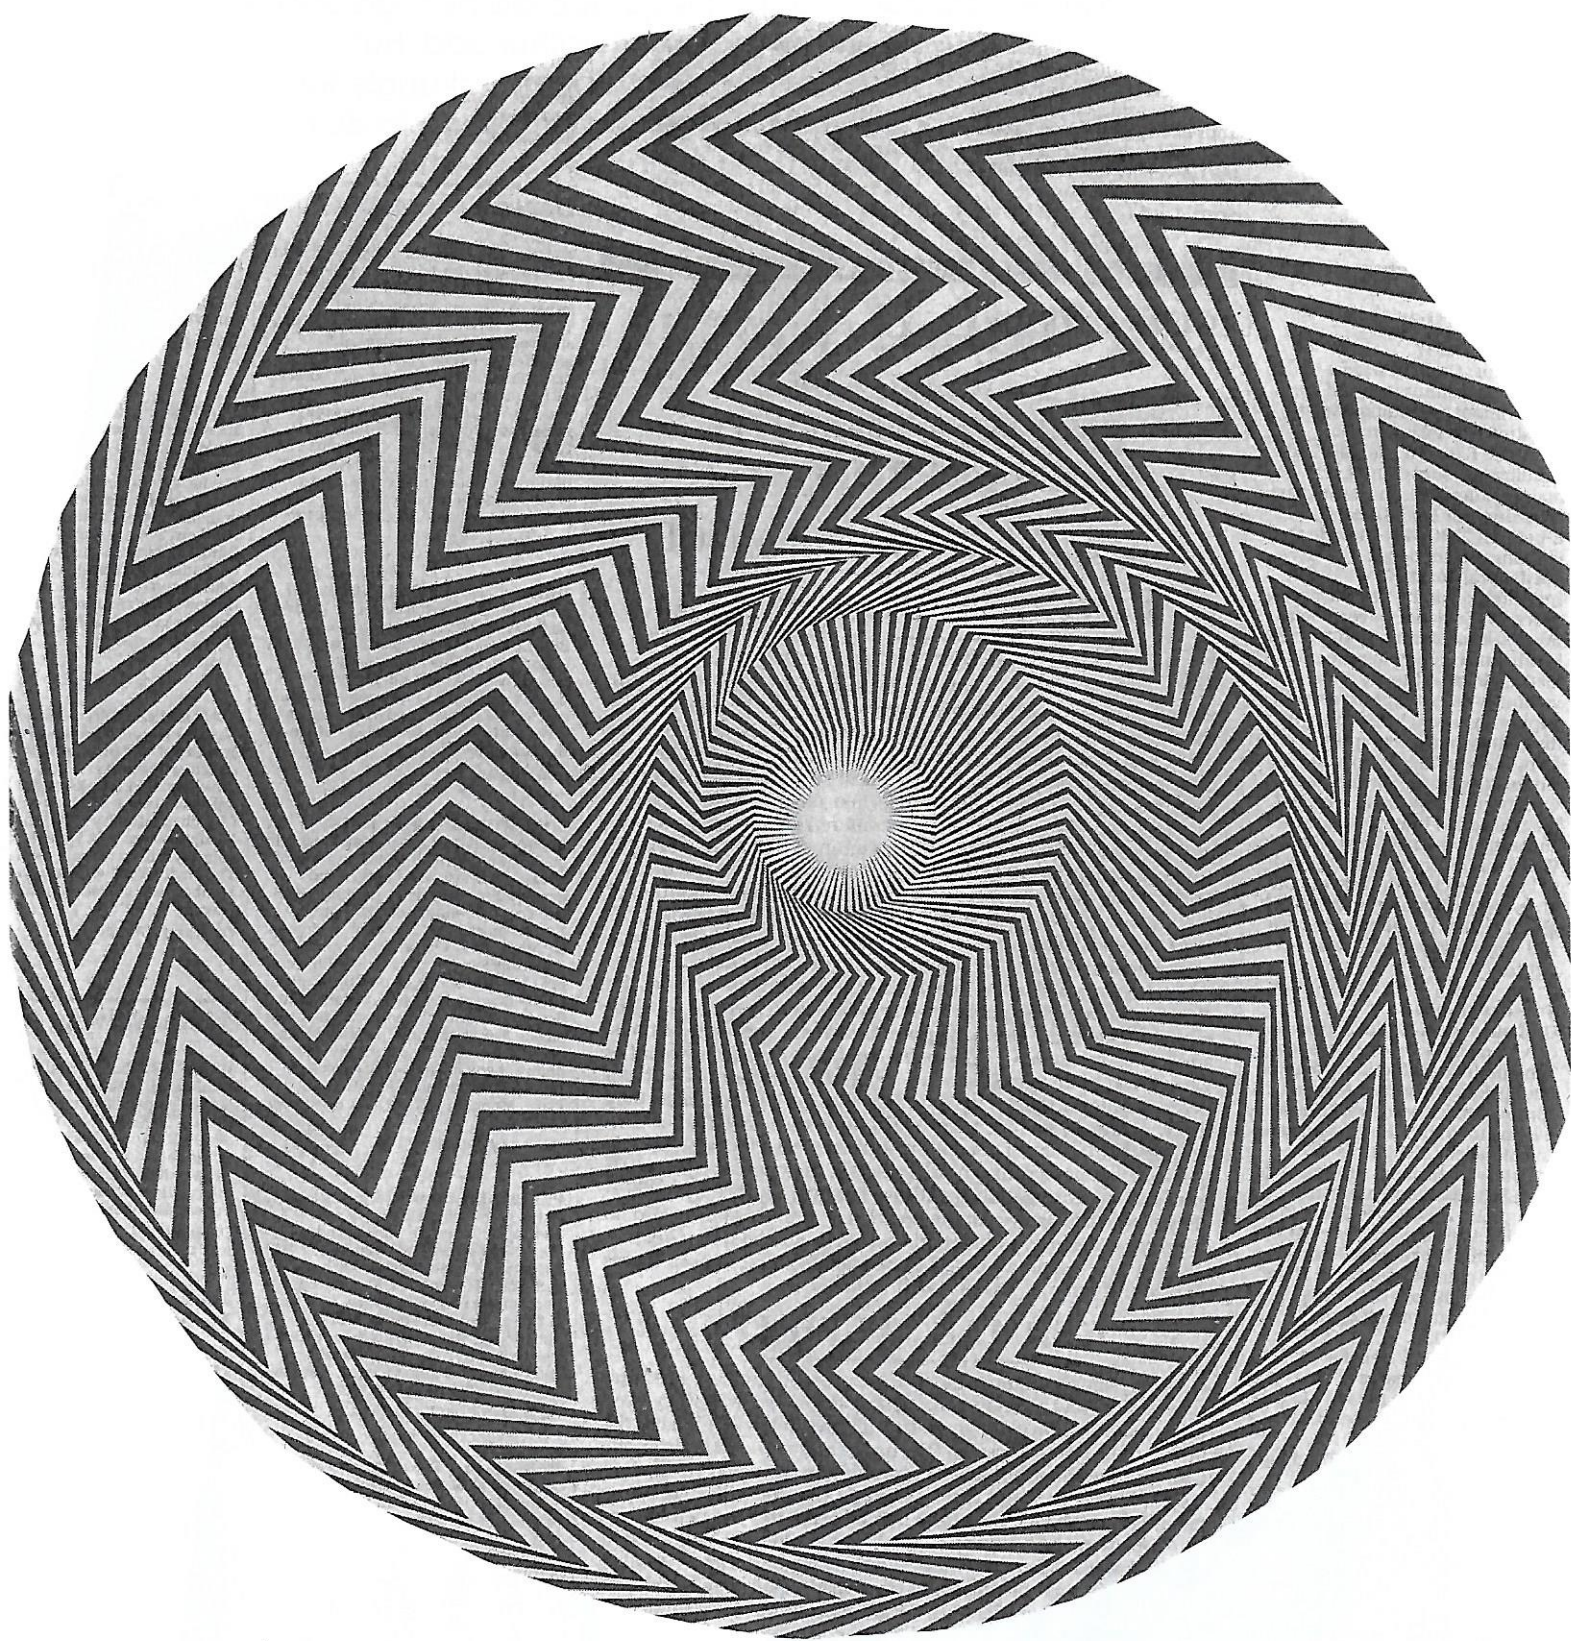

monday 27th jan

Tonight we are going to focus on one of Britain's greatest abstract painters. She began painting in the sixties in a style which became known as OP (optical) art. Her work produces moving images in your brain although the pictures are stationary (optical illusions). Her name is Bridget Riley.

What to bring

your choice

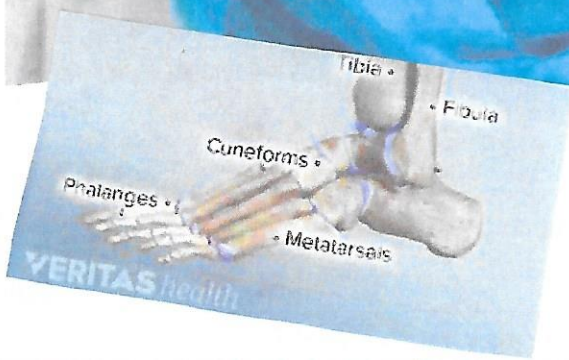

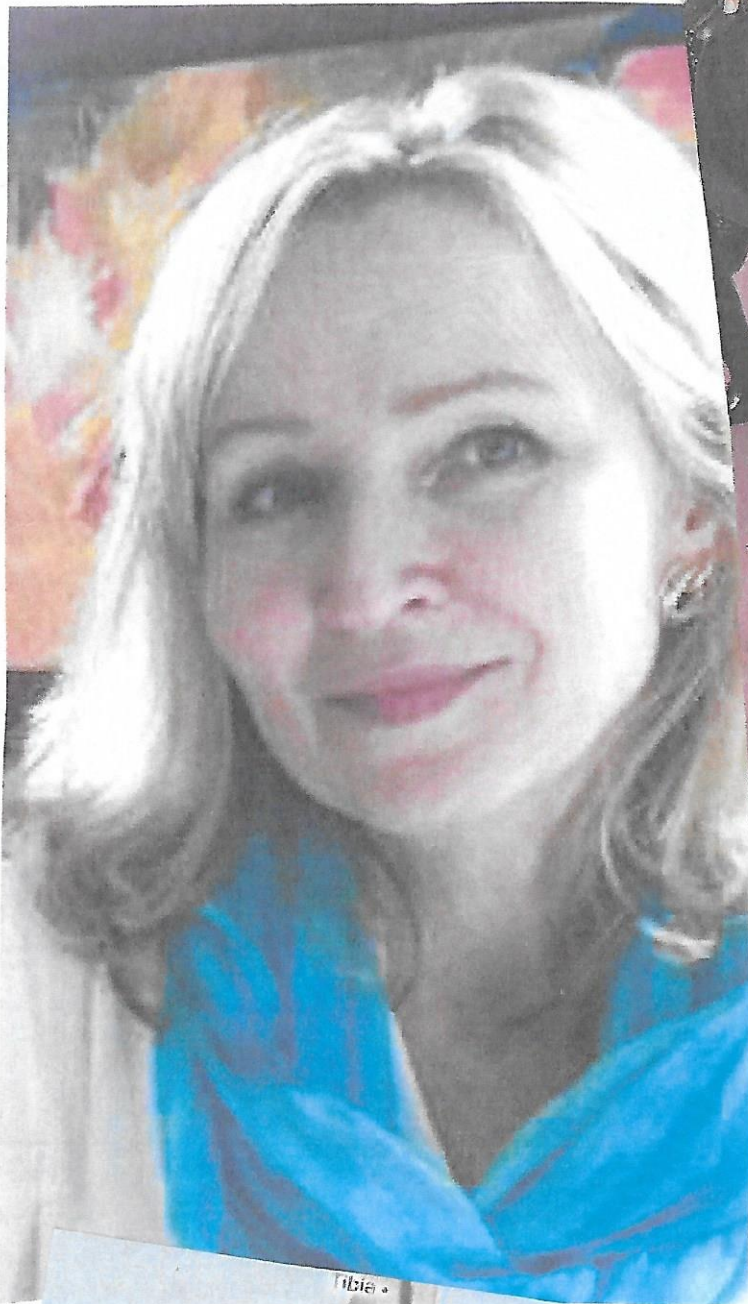

monday 3rd feb

Tonight we are going to do a workshop led by Olga Lomax on how to draw feet. This may seem rather odd, but drawing hands and feet has always been a struggle for many artists, and since next week we are going to do a design exercise I thought this might be very useful.

what to bring

your choice

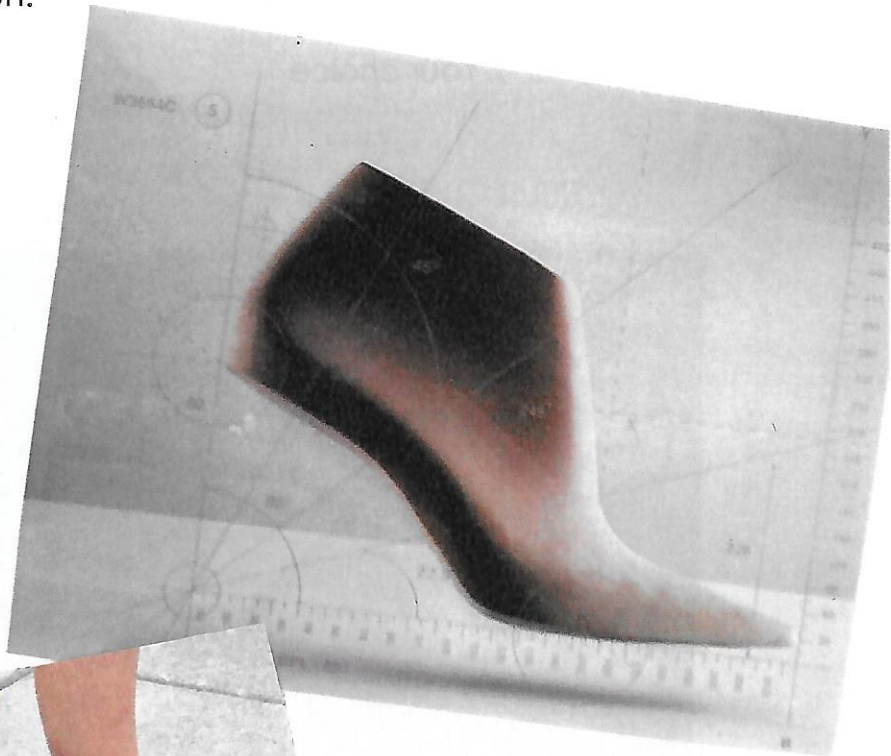

monday 10th feb

Tonight we are going to look at another aspect of art. That is design. Last week we had a workshop on how to draw the human foot. This week we are going to design what goes on the human foot. That is Shoes, and in particular women's shoes. The idea is that you can let your creative juices run wild, and come up with some outrageous designs. Have fun.

What to bring

your choice

monday 24 feb

Although the creation of a picture can be very complex it can also be amazingly simple. Tonight , the subject matter is your choice but you must complete the picture in a single line ! Look at the picture below to understand the idea. No cheating.

What to bring

Your choice

